DTES. Help wasn't long in coming as first responders were already in the area for a demolition

The emergency demolition of a building on Powell Street turned out to be a fortunate turn of events for a 33-year-old mother-to-be who had an emergency of her own when she went into labour with twins late Wednesday night.

The mother lives in the area and had gone for a walk around 11 p.m. when her ordeal began in the Downtown Eastside's Oppenheimer Park, said Vancouver Police Department spokesman Sgt. Randy Fincham.

Thanks to the nearby blowdown, first responders were already in the area and able to attend quickly when she gave birth prematurely to a boy and a girl.

"When police got there they found a woman who had obviously just given birth to a very small baby, and they rendered assistance to the woman at that point," Fincham said.

"The officers called for paramedics, and when the paramedics arrived on scene police could see that the woman was again showing signs of labour. At that time the woman delivered her second child."

The babies weighed just 3.5 and four pounds each, suggesting the mother was about seven months pregnant, according to a gestational weight chart on Twinstuff.com.

"It was fortunate the officers were close by," Fincham said. "There could have been dire consequences if the citizen (who alerted police), the police or the paramedics hadn't been there to readily look after these small babies."

The mother and the babies are doing well in hospital, he said. KATE WEBB/METRO

Vancouver gamers honour five-year-old cancer victim

Support. When a girl died of an inoperable brain tumour in May, one group of gamers sprung to action

MATT KIELTYKA
matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

They may stomp around in laser-spewing robots the size of buildings, but steely gamers are showing there's a heart beneath their metal shells in their remembrance of a five-year-old Vancouver girl who recently lost her battle to cancer.

Sarah Parries loved nothing more than to saddle up to her father, Jon, and cheer him on as he played the popular PC combat game MechWarrior Online, developed by Vancouver's Piranha Games.

"It was great; she'd sit up on my lap and watch me play for hours," Jon told Metro, adding that Sarah also took a few turns at the controls. "She's a fighter."

When she died of an inoperable brain tumour in May, the tight-knit MechWarrior community — counting more than one million gamers — sprung to action.

"They wanted us to do something, they drove us on," said Bryan Ekman, creative director at Piranha. "The (message board) thread that was generated in support of this little girl was unbelievable."

The team at Piranha and partners Infinite Game Publishing consulted Jon and developed a special in-game "Jenner" Mech — Sarah's favourite and every bit as energetic as the girl according to her aunt — adorned with teddy bears, rainbows and more of her favourite images.

Purchase one for $10 by Aug. 20 and Piranha will donate the proceeds to the Canadian Cancer Society in Sarah's honour.

Sarah's Jenner launched Tuesday, and by Thursday afternoon more than $48,000 had been raised by MechWarrior Online players.

No one could believe how fast gamers latched onto the campaign.

"I literally started crying," said family friend Samantha-Lynn Wheatley. "It was going up by thousands every hour."

"The outpouring from the community was just amazing," said Ekman, father of three young daughters. "It's something that's dear to our hearts, something that's very close and personal. The best part is we get to support someone in our community."

Sarah's grieving family says the campaign is worth it if even one other child is helped by the donation drive.

"I can never thank the Mech community enough," said Jon. "It helped a lot to know there are people out there who genuinely care."

Information about the campaign can be found at mwomercs.com/sarah.

Piranha Games creative director Bryan Ekman is blown away by the MechWarrior Online community's response to an in-game fundraiser, launched in honour of a five-year-old Sarah Parries, inset, who recently died of cancer.

Trudeau adds support to pot legalization

Federal Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau speaks to supporters in Vancouver on Thursday.
EMILY JACKSON/METRO

A campaign to hold a referendum to decriminalize marijuana in B.C. got an unexpected celebrity supporter as it rolled through Vancouver on Thursday.

When federal Liberal leader Justin Trudeau met dozens of supporters at English Bay during his visit, he took his position on marijuana one step further than the Sensible BC campaign, which was also in town to promote its cause.

"I'm not just in favour of decriminalization; I'm in favour of legalization as well," Trudeau told a throng of reporters, reiterating off-the-cuff statements he made in Kelowna earlier this week.

Regulating marijuana and requiring proof of age for purchase puts better control on the substance than decriminalization, which keeps the "gangs and the criminal elements that are profiting from marijuana in business," he said.

The Conservatives — staunch advocates for keeping the drug illegal — have called his new position "irresponsible."

Meantime, Sensible BC also stopped in Vancouver on Thursday to try to drum up support for a marijuana referendum.

Starting Sept. 9, the campaign will have 90 days to collect roughly 400,000 signatures in order to force a referendum in 2014.

Sensible BC's internal polls show more than 70 per cent of British Columbians support marijuana decriminalization.

See the Light at English Bay

Celebration of Light. What you need to know about the annual fireworks festival

What: The Celebration of Light is a free show where three teams get one night each to wow spectators by lighting up the sky to music. To listen to the music, bring speakers and tune in to Shore 104.3. The United Kingdom, Canada and Thailand will compete this year.

Where: The main events take place at English Bay, but if you want a seat, get there early or find a friend with a balcony.

How to get there: Leave your car at home, as parking will be a nightmare. TransLink will provide extra bus and SkyTrain service, but police advise patrons to be patient and give themselves lots of extra time.

Who: About 400,000 residents and tourists attend the festival each night.

Police strive to make it a family-oriented event, Sgt. Randy Fincham said on Thursday. There will be a "very enhanced" police presence in the area, he said, and they will be ticketing those drinking and intoxicated in public.

When: The festival is on July 27 and 31 and Aug. 3. The show starts at 10 p.m. and lasts about 25 minutes.

EMILY JACKSON/METRO

Be sure to stake out a seat early for the annual Celebration of Light.

If you took the quit smoking drug CHAMPIX between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010, your rights could be affected by the certification of a class action. Please read carefully.

The Ontario Superior court has certified a class action for Canadians who took Champix between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010 and allegedly suffered certain reactions. The Representative Plaintiff is Kenneth Parker.

What is the Class Action About?

The lawsuit seeks compensation for all class members. It alleges that, between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010, Pfizer Canada Inc. failed to adequately warn of the risk of certain psychiatric adverse events allegedly related to Champix.

Pfizer Canada Inc. denies the allegations, which have not been established, and is defending the lawsuit.

Who is Included in the Class Action?

All persons in Canada who took Champix during the period from April 2, 2007 to May 31, 2010 and who, while taking or after taking Champix to help quit smoking, experienced any of the psychiatric adverse events or symptoms listed below:

- thoughts about suicide or dying
- attempts to commit suicide
- new or worse depression, anxiety or panic attacks
- feeling very agitated or restless
- acting aggressive, being angry or violent
- acting on dangerous impulses
- an extreme increase in activity and talking (mania)
- abnormal thoughts or sensations
- seeing or hearing things that are not there (hallucinations)
- feeling people are against you (paranoia)
- feeling confused
- other unusual changes in behaviours

If you are a person who fits the above description, you are a member of the "Class". If you are a relative of a member of the Class who is entitled to make claims under any of the Dependants Statutes in Canada as a result of the death or personal injury of your relative, you are a member of the "Family Class".

If you are a Class member or Family Class member you do not need to do anything at this stage to participate – you are automatically included in the class action. You are encouraged however to contact Class Counsel for more information, and to discuss the steps necessary for preserving medical records that may be needed for any claim that may be advanced on your behalf.

You Must Opt-Out if You Do Not Want to Participate

If you do not want to be part of this lawsuit you must notify Class Counsel at the address below, in writing, by no latter than September 20, 2013, providing your name and address and indicating that you do not want to be part of this lawsuit.

If you are a Class member or a Family Class member and do not exclude yourself by that date you will be included in this lawsuit and will be forever bound by the court's judgment on the common issues, whether favourable or not.

What are the Financial Consequences?

If the action is not successful on the common issues, no class member will be responsible for legal fees or costs. The Representative Plaintiff has entered into a contingency fee agreement with Class Counsel for the legal work on the common issues. Class Counsel will be paid only if the action is successful.

If the class is successful at the common issues trial, further proceedings will be necessary for individual Class members to prove their own personal claims. Class members may be responsible for the costs of proving their own claims, and may wish to hire a lawyer to assist them with these further proceedings. Class Counsel is available to be hired by class members on a contingency basis, or class members may hire another lawyer of their own choosing.

Statistics. City's violent crime rate falls for sixth year

Violent crime in Vancouver fell much further than in the rest of the country from 2011 to 2012, Statistics Canada says, but overall, the whole country has been become more peaceful since 1991.

Violent crime was down by three per cent nationwide in 2012, and down five per cent across B.C., but plunged 6.9 per cent in Vancouver, making it the sixth consecutive year violent crime has fallen in the city.

Mayor Gregor Robertson credited the Vancouver Police Department and neighbourhood volunteers for the drop, while in an interview with CTV on Thursday, police Chief Jim Chu touted better policing practices, community relations and technology-assisted techniques.

But SFU criminologist Graham Farrell said these are only part of the equation.

"The Canadian crime-rate trends are surprisingly similar to (drops in) the U.S., and crime has also been going down in the U.K., Australia, New Zealand and most European countries," he said. "It's across the industrialized world, really."

Farrell and his colleagues published a theory in 2011 to explain the phenomenon, dubbed the "debut crime hypothesis," after analyzing data from around the world.

The theory goes that technological changes in the past two decades, such as better car locks, alarm systems and home security, have prevented many petty "gateway" crimes, thereby making it more difficult for criminals to commit more serious ones.

"To commit a drive-by shooting, you're probably going to use a stolen vehicle. To go and rob somewhere, you need a vehicle to do it," Farrell said. "So there's a case — and the research hasn't really been done — that they're in fact interlinked."

Since 2008, the violent crime rate in Vancouver has fallen 16.6 per cent and property crime has fallen 20.9 per cent, the city says.

Suspect under arrest

Man slashed in Stanley Park

A 33-year-old Vancouver man was slashed in the neck in Stanley Park on Wednesday and needed several stitches. Police spokesman Sgt. Randy Fincham said the attack happened at 10:45 p.m. in the Second Beach parking lot. A suspect was arrested but has not yet been charged, and the relationship between the men is unclear. Police believe it was an isolated incident that poses no danger to the public. KATE WEBB/METRO

Pedestrian accident

Woman run over by flatbed trailer

A 54-year-old woman suffered serious injuries on Wednesday night after being run over by a flatbed trailer hitched to a truck on Hastings Street. Sgt. Randy Fincham said the woman stepped off the curb after the truck passed and might not have seen the trailer it was pulling. She is now in stable condition in hospital. Police don't believe alcohol or speed were factors in the accident.

Month-long dry spell not unusual

Read this outside.
Stretch of sunshine no record-breaker, but still a welcome aberration

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Unless the weather forecast changes drastically — and keep your fingers crossed it won't — Vancouver will have had uninterrupted sunny skies for an entire month as of Saturday.

But Vancouverites having an identity crisis without the city's characteristic rain may be surprised to learn we've got a long way to go to break the record for days without rain.

"We're not even halfway there," said David Jones, meteorologist with Environment Canada.

The longest dry spell lasted 58 days in 1951, Jones said. And most people remember the long, hot summer during Expo 86 when the city went 53 days without a drop.

While many (especially some Torontonians) think of Vancouver as wet all year long, a very dry spell in the summer is "not that extraordinary," Jones said.

"It's two climates here," he said, adding that we haven't even cracked the Top 10 list of the driest periods. It would take 33 days of sun to tie for 10th spot.

There isn't a particular trend to Vancouver's sunny weather, with the hot sprees spread out across the decades.

For beach-lovers hoping for a record-breaking season, Jones said rain isn't likely for at least the next week. Temperatures will, however, cool off a bit to settle in the mid- to low-twenties.

One for the books? Nope

"We're not even halfway there."

Tsawwassen. B.C. teen arrested, charged with 6 counts of sexual assault

A 14-year-old Delta youth faces a string of charges related to sexual assaults in nearby Tsawwassen.

Delta Police say the teen, who can't be identified under the Youth Criminal Justice Act, was arrested on July 17.

He is now charged with six counts of sexual assault, but the case is still open and a tip line has been set up to gather more details.

Investigators say the arrest came almost one month after the public was urged to come forward with any information about a series of troubling assaults in the Vancouver suburb.

In all cases, the suspect would run up behind women and either grab their buttocks or bear-hug them around their waist and breasts.

The attacker would then flee before the startled victim had a chance to react.

Bulgaria. Officials release name, face of Canadian accused in bus bombing

Bulgarian authorities distributed on Thursday the names and images of two wanted suspects — one of them Canadian — involved in a bomb attack that killed five Israeli tourists and a Bulgarian bus driver last year.

The first alleged terrorist is identified as Meliad Farah, also known as Hussein Hussein, an Australian citizen born Nov. 5, 1980. The second is Hassan El Hajj Hassan, a Canadian citizen born March 22, 1988, according to a statement of the interior ministry.

Canada's Immigration Minister Jason Kenney said in February that one of the suspects was born in Lebanon, came to Canada at age eight, became a Canadian citizen and then left at age 12. He said he assumed the man was a dual Lebanese-Canadian citizen.

Hassan El Hajj Hassan CONTRIBUTED

"I understand he may have been back to Canada a few times since then, but he has not been a habitual resident in Canada since the age of 12," Kenney said.

A third suspect, a suicide bomber who died on the scene, has not been identified.

In February, Bulgarian authorities said there were reasons to believe that the suspects were members of the militant wing of Hezbollah. Last week, Minister Yovchev said there were "clear signs that say that Hezbollah was behind the bus bombing."

Lac-Mégantic disaster. Police raid railway office as company stays silent

Quebec provincial police have raided an office belonging to the railway involved in the Lac-Mégantic disaster, adding to a growing pile of legal concerns for the U.S. company.

Investigators searched for clues Thursday inside the Farnham branch of Montreal, Maine & Atlantic Railway (MMA) as part of their ongoing criminal probe into the derailment.

Farnham, a town between Montreal and Lac-Mégantic, is also the home of Tom Harding, the engineer of the train.

Lac-Mégantic's mayor announced earlier this week she had sent a lawyer's letter to MMA, demanding that it immediately reimburse the town $4 million for environmental cleanup costs.

Getting comfy

"We'll be in Farnham as long as it takes to gather all the evidence we're looking for there."

Quebec provincial police Insp. Michel Forget

Colette Roy-Laroche alleged the community had to pick up the tab for MMA because it failed to pay companies it had hired to mop up spilled oil.

The letter told the company it had 48 hours — or until noon Thursday — to respond.

A few hours after the deadline passed, Roy-Laroche told reporters that Lac-Mégantic never heard from MMA.

Dublin

Man's body left to rot in occupied home for years

Irish police say a dead man's badly decomposed remains have been found in an occupied Dublin house and may have lain there, undisturbed, for four years.

Thursday's macabre discovery in the inner-city district of Phibsborough follows renovations to the property.

Police say the house's residents were illegal squatters and drug users.

They say the previous tenant may have died during a fire at the property in 2009, but his body was not seen by firefighters and eventually obscured by a broken piece of furniture.

A pathologist says the man appears to have died from natural causes, and DNA and dental records may be needed to identify him. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Train likely went twice speed limit

Spain derailment. Reason still unknown as authorities wait to question injured driver

A Spanish train that hurtled off the rails and smashed into a security wall was going so fast that carriages tumbled off the tracks like dominos, killing 80 people and maiming dozens more, according to eyewitness accounts and video footage obtained Thursday.

An Associated Press analysis of video images suggests the train may have been travelling at twice the speed limit or more along that curved stretch of track. The unanswered question is: why?

Spain's government said two probes have been launched into the train's derailment Wednesday night on its approach to a Christian festival city in northwest Spain.

The regional government in Galicia confirmed that police planned to question the 52-year-old train driver, in Santiago de Compostela's main hospital with unspecified injuries, as both a witness and as a possible suspect, but cautioned that possible faults in safety equipment were also being investigated.

80 km/h limit

192 km/h

The highest estimate of the train's speed based on an examination of video images.

Eyewitness accounts backed by security-camera footage suggested that the eight-carriage train was going too fast as it tried to turn left underneath a road bridge. Spanish officials said the speed limit on that section of track is 80 km/h.

An Associated Press estimate of the train's speed using the time stamp of the video and the estimated distance between two pylons gives a range of 144 to 192 km/h. Another estimate calculated on the basis of the typical distance between railroad ties gives a range of 156 to 182 km/h.

Train company Renfe identified the driver, Francisco Jose Garzon Amo, as a 30-year employee. Renfe's president, Julio Gomez-Pomar Rodriguez, told the Cadena Cope radio network that the driver had worked on that route for more than a year.

Spain enters three days of mourning

The Interior Ministry raised the death toll to 80 in what was Spain's deadliest train wreck in four decades. The Galician government said 94 others remained hospitalized, 31 of them in critical condition.

The U.S. State Department said one American was killed and five others injured. State Department spokeswoman Marie Harf said those numbers were "likely to change."

Changed forever

"July 24 will no longer be the eve of a day of celebration."

Alberto Nunez Feijoo, regional president of Galcia, of which Santiago de Compostela is the capital

Santiago officials had been preparing for the city's celebrated Catholic festival Thursday but cancelled it and took control of the city's main indoor sports arena to use as a makeshift morgue.

In the morning, Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy, a native of Santiago de Compostela, toured the crash scene and went to a nearby hospital to visit the wounded. In the evening, King Carlos and Queen Sofia went to the same hospital, dressed in funereal black. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cops issue arrest warrant for gore website owner

Luka Magnotta video. Edmonton police try to track down missing Mark Marek, who was granted bail despite being called a flight risk

ANNALISE KLINGBEIL
Metro in Edmonton

Edmonton police have issued a warrant for the arrest of Mark Marek, the "elusive" owner and operator of a gore website, who was charged with corrupting morals earlier this month.

Police are asking for the public's assistance in locating the 38-year-old, who was charged on July 17 for allegedly posting a graphic murder video online last spring that was sent to him by Luka Magnotta.

Mark Marek, 38
EDMONTON POLICE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Police allege the video, titled 1 Lunatic, 1 Ice Pick, depicts the murder of university student Jun Lin, whose severed body parts were mailed across the country in the spring of 2012.

Marek appeared in court via CCTV on July 18. He was released on $7,500 bail and given a host of conditions to abide by, including not accessing the Internet.

At the time, Crown prosecutor Julie Roy said Marek was a flight risk and noted that when he was arrested, he was carrying his passport and $18,000 in cash.

Police said on Thursday that Marek had breached conditions of his bail and cannot be found.

A police spokesperson said when probation officers did a check at an address provided by Marek, he was not there.

Marek was arrested in Edmonton earlier this month after a lengthy investigation.

"This was a very long investigation. Basically our suspect was very elusive," EPS Staff Sgt. Bill Clark told reporters on July 17.

Elliot Lake collapse. Mall owner admits he could have fixed eroding roof

The owner of the crumbling Algo Centre Mall admitted Thursday he actually had the cash to fix the leaking roof but chose not to because it would have meant pouring money down the drain.

Testifying for a third day at the inquiry into the deadly collapse of the Elliot Lake, Ont., mall, Bob Nazarian said he sold a property he owned in 2009 — four years after he purchased the mall — then spent $2.6 million to buy another.

Why, commission counsel Peter Doody asked, didn't he instead put that money into fixing the roof?

"Because," Nazarian said.

"Because why?"

"The Algo Mall was a black hole. No matter how much money you put in ... that mall was doomed," Nazarian responded.

"Simply, I would not put my life in it. I worked 42 years to gather some (funds) for my family. I'm not going to put everything in this building."

The stunning admission came after days of testimony about how Nazarian had been desperate to finance repairs to the leaking roof, which caved in last summer killing two women. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reality TV production, such as the Women Tell All episode of The Bachelor, is booming in Canada, but a new survey says some workers feel their interests are being overlooked. CITY

Reality TV boom is creating poor job conditions: Workers

Broadcast production.
Survey finds that long hours, lack of benefits are among issues that need to be addressed by industry

The market for reality television has exploded, with Canadian versions of The Amazing Race, Storage Wars, Big Brother and The Bachelor all competing for viewer attention.

But workers in the industry say they are being overlooked by some production companies intent on profits over the interests of their workers.

An exclusive first look by Torstar News Service at interim results of a survey taken by the Canadian Media Guild say workers complain that long hours, lack of security and benefits are some of the big issues that need to be addressed in the burgeoning industry.

"Factual TV is the new frontier and the business has really grown, which is great. But the downside to this is some workers who are saying that they've given their blood, sweat and tears in an industry that is open to abuse," says Karen Wirsig of the Canadian Media Guild.

The union decided to conduct a survey after being approached by reality TV workers about working conditions, Wirsig says.

While long hours and demanding conditions are not unusual in the film and television industry, reality TV productions typically have smaller budgets, hire more freelancers and work on tighter deadlines, which could exacerbate poor working conditions, says the union.

THE METRO LIST

metronews.ca

1 Humble beginnings. As the Duchess of Cambridge pushed forth the fruit of the royal loom, global media granted her highness a rare modicum of privacy, foregoing details regarding distress of her sovereign regions or straining of the royal bosom. Nay, but whilst the revelation of the imperial moniker, George Alexander Louis, stirred such zeal amidst the multitudes, I reflected thusly to myself: "Why am I still watching this?"

2 Politics. British Prime Minister David Cameron announced a novel endeavour to filter out Internet pornography for his citizens. After all, everyone knows that most of the salacious content that appears on-screen arrives unsolicited and if not for Cameron, this material would continue to present itself to innocent husbands, boyfriends and teenagers. Well cheerio, good sir. And good luck getting re-elected.

3 Sext-posed. In 2011, a sexting scandal forced Anthony Weiner to resign from U.S. Congress. Now running for mayor of New York City, he's still sexting, but refuses to withdraw his candidacy. After all, his wife remains staunchly by his side saying, "Yes, he's made mistakes, but he's apologized. Sure, he made them again repeatedly, but I love him. Besides how do you think we met?"

4 Got it. Selena Gomez turned 21 this week and celebrated by legally having her first alcoholic drink. More importantly, every adult male that has seen Gomez's video Come And Get It, can now officially stop feeling dirty.

5 Bynes some time. Amanda Bynes is being held for mental evaluation after allegedly starting a fire in a California resident's driveway. Oh, so now a few nasty tweets, one little hit-and-run, bong out a window, shave your head, wear a crazy wig to court, start a small fire in the driveway, and suddenly you're crazy?

6 Who's coming? Scientists at Imperial College London have designed a concept mission to land astronauts on Mars. There has been news of other such missions over the last year, making me wonder why the major world governments keep telling us that global warming is not that big an issue, but seem to be fervently searching for other options. Here's the scary part: They'll use our tax dollars in the name of progress, but you know they're not taking all of us, right?

7 Fine-tuning. Last week, two men walked out with Toronto General Hospital's baby grand piano at one o'clock in the afternoon. I don't have much to add except that I once got caught stealing a candy from the bulk bin while shopping at Loblaws.

8 This week in 1996. The Spice Girls scored their first U.K. No. 1 with Wannabe. It would sell more than six million copies and win an award for best British-written single. "So tell me what you want, what you really really want. I wanna really, really wanna zig-a-zig-ah." Best-written single indeed.

9 Take a bow. This week saw the untimely end of character actor Dennis Farina. Farina, who played cops and criminals alike, actually worked as a Chicago police officer for 18 years. Some will remember him from Law & Order, and others from films like Get Shorty and Saving Private Ryan, but to me, he'll always be Cousin Avy from Snatch. Rest in peace, bubbeleh, we'll miss you.

Giant cockerel takes its perch

A gargantuan electric blue cockerel has been unveiled on a plinth in London's most iconic city square. Hahn/Cock, a 4.72-metre-high fibreglass sculpture by German artist Katharina Fritsch, is perched next to sombre military monuments in Trafalgar Square and is meant to symbolize regeneration and rebirth. METRO

Double meaning

- The sculpture's title "hahn," German for "cock," carries the same double meaning as in English and is a deliberate double entendre.
- It mimics the Gallic rooster, the unofficial national symbol of France, yet is placed on a square that commemorates Britain's 1805 Battle of Trafalgar, a naval victory over France.

Artist's viewpoint

"I am making an image of a male animal. Women are getting more and more into the active role, they determine things, they make their way."

German sculptor Katharina Fritsch

Tough critics

"It's very ugly – a massive eye-sore. But that's modern art for you, something big and controversial — but I would like to try and climb up the cockerel."

Brandy Klark (Aubrey Plaza) is an overachiever. She's the publisher of her own magazine, Women With a Y, a straight-A student with a full scholarship to Georgetown University and her high school valedictorian. She's also a virgin, a status she hopes to change soon with the help of Rusty Waters (Scott Porter), a college surfer stud. Attacking her new project with the gusto that won her accolades in school, she gets the advice of friends and family (Christopher Mintz-Plasse, Alia Shawkat, Sarah Steele and Rachel Bilson) and makes up a sex "to do" list, applying the zeal that made her a mathlete.

Let's talk about sex

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

The To Do List. Teen sex comedy genre gets a gender twist as the female becomes the hunter looking for bedpost notches

Richard: Mark, if you're of the generation familiar with Snackwells and skorts, then this movie may resonate a little louder for you than it did for me. It's a cleverly drawn coming-of-age picture, set in 1993, that gets the tone of the times right — skorts and all — but it left me feeling as though I was watching a throwback to the sex comedies of the early '90s filtered through a 2013 lens. In other words, less innocence, more bodily fluids. What did you think?

Mark: One of the things I love about movies is how much you can learn from them. Richard, I had no idea how tough it is for an attractive young woman to lose her virginity! Well, live and loin. Switching the gender roles and making the teenage girl the aggressor was a nice touch, and setting it in 1993 made its pre-Internet sexuality seem almost believable. It's John Hughes with an R rating — not a bad thing. What did you think of Aubrey Plaza?

RC: I like Aubrey Plaza. I think if this part had been played by anyone else — imagine Emma Stone or Imogen Poots — it would have lost some of its charm. Plaza is naturally off balance, so the stranger moments of this movie don't feel forced or quirky for the sake of being quirky. As I said earlier, I didn't much go for some of the bodily fluid gags — or the gross Caddyshack tribute — but Plaza trying to vamp it up in an ill-fitting bathing suit is a really funny scene.

MB: I liked Aubrey Plaza too. She was just gawky enough to make the movie seem credible. In fact, the whole movie is well cast. Bill Hader has lots of great moments, and Plaza's two girlfriends are not the typical cuties you usually find in a teen picture. I actually think there's another influence working on this picture — Napoleon Dynamite. From the Idaho setting to the oversaturated colours, quirky rhythms and simple cinematography, there's a lot the two movies have in common, although this one seems more overtly commercial.

RC: Maybe more commercial, but telling the story from a female point of view is a nice change from the usual boy-centric sex comedy story.

MB: Richard, in spite of what some people may think, I am not, nor have I ever been, a teenage girl. But I found I could relate to the story, because although it takes place in 1993, it takes place in Boise, Idaho, which feels like 1973.

Thriller

The Wolverine

Director. James Mangold

Stars. Hugh Jackman, Rila Fukushima

This may be the sixth time Hugh Jackman has moussed up his pointy mane to play the eponymous comic-book character but this latest version shows The Wolverine still has claws. Summoned to Japan by a dying, rich old friend, Wolverine winds up protecting an heiress from deadly yakuza, a toxin-spitting mutant and a (rather disappointing) giant samurai robot. Ridiculous as that sounds, The Wolverine's more crafty sequences (especially atop a speeding bullet train) help amplify the action's unravelling tone. STEVE GOW

Was dark role a factor in actor's death?

Cory Monteith. Glee star wanted to tap into the troubles of his youth in his final film role — a young junkie on the run from police

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

A screen shot from Cory Monteith's last film, McCanick, in which he plays a junkie on the run from police. CONTRIBUTED

Cory Monteith's fatal relapse into heroin addiction might have been triggered by his last film role — that of a hustling drug addict — speculates a source close to the actor.

The insider, who spoke to Metro on condition of anonymity, said Monteith's death bears a lot of similarities to that of Heath Ledger, who died of a prescription pill overdose months after becoming consumed by his Oscar-winning role as the insane Joker in The Dark Night.

Monteith portrayed Simon Weeks, a young junkie on the run from police, in McCanick, which was shot over three weeks in Philadelphia last September.

"It may or may not have put another step in this," says the source, who knew Monteith for most of his life.

McCanick's director, Josh C. Waller, told the Los Angeles Times after Monteith's sudden death that the Glee star had actively pursued the dark role, saying he wanted to "tap into things from his youth that he hadn't been able to use as an actor yet."

By March, Monteith's Glee castmates realized he was using and staged an intervention, prompting him to enter rehab in April for a month.

The actor's associate says it's hard to know for sure whether his role as a hard-core addict could have reignited his real-life addiction, which Monteith openly admitted to struggling with since his teens.

"That's the thing. If you do any acting or you do any acting classes, you get involved. You try to literally put yourself in their shoes," he says, "and it does help if you find a character within the character and you become that, so it's not really acting. You're just being."

Waller told the Times he last saw Monteith a month ago, when they met to watch a finished cut of McCanick.

The film does not yet have a distributor, but it has been submitted for consideration to the Toronto Film Festival.

In an interview on a Philadelphia radio show during its filming last September, the director praised the 31-year-old's passion for the role, which was a stark contrast to his more innocent and widely known character, Finn Hudson, on Glee.

"I've got to say, on Cory's behalf, his commitment to this role is really different than anything I've certainly seen him do, and it's been amazing to watch him do this," Waller said.

Monteith died alone in a Vancouver hotel room July 13 after consuming a toxic combination of heroin and alcohol.

The man behind Sharknado masterpiece

#Sharknado. OK, the movie might not win best picture, but it became a campy classic thanks in part to writer Thunder Levin

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO
Metro World News in New York City

If you have a television and a Twitter account, and you're not aware of the bizarre phenomenon that is Sharknado, then we can only imagine that you were in a temporary coma when the movie premiered on Syfy last week.

For those of you who have only recently re-joined the waking world (welcome back!) here's a quick primer: Sharknado is a movie about a freak tropical storm that somehow sucks man-eating sharks out of the ocean, whipping them into a cyclone of dead eyes and sharp teeth, and depositing them in downtown Los Angeles. Sharks, in a tornado. That's about the extent of it — it is somewhat brilliant in its absurd (so absurd) simplicity.

When Sharknado premiered, people lost their freaking minds. Twitter almost imploded, with #Sharknado generating about 5,000 tweets per minute over the course of a few hours. Because, dudes, Sharknado. We caught up with the man who wrote the damn thing, Thunder Levin, to ask, a few pertinent questions.

OK, how the hell did you come up with the idea for a movie ... about sharks ... in a tornado. Take me through the process.

I'm sorry to say the initial idea didn't come from me. I had been involved with a couple of films for The Asylum (the company that produces a lot of the Syfy movies) and they came to me and asked me to write a movie for them called Shark Storm, but it was going to be a fairly straight disaster movie and it didn't really interest me. Then, about a month later, they came back and asked me to write something called Sharknato. At least that's what I thought they said. I couldn't understand why the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would be battling sharks. But they explained, "No, Sharknado. As in a tornado filled with sharks!" They gave me a half page of notes and I said, "This is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of and, as long as I can write it that way, I'm in!" The concept came to them from Syfy, who apparently had received a pitch with that title from Anthony Ferrante. So the whole thing came full circle when I, in perhaps my dumbest career move ever, withdrew from directing the film and Anthony was hired to make it.

Did you have any idea the kind of phenomenon this thing would be?

Of course not. Who could have imagined all this?! I thought it would be a fun movie that people would have fun with. And once I saw the poster and tagline last November, and realized that the marketing of the film would tap into the same sense of fun I'd tried to put in the script, I thought we had a good chance to do fairly well. But I don't think anyone could have predicted the explosion that occurred. It's just been unbelievable.

Were you following #Sharknado on Twitter when the movie premiered? People were losing it.

Yes, I was part of the live tweet that the Asylum had scheduled with some of the people behind the movie. The organized tweetcast got completely overwhelmed by the huge public response. I'd look down to type a tweet and by the time I looked back up at the screen a couple of seconds later another 200 tweets would have come in. It was crazy.

Train back on tracks

Music. Calling all angels (and mermaids) — Train is back on the touring rails promoting their sixth studio album

Train has released its sixth album, California 37. GETTY IMAGES

When we spoke to Pat Monahan, the lead singer of Train, he was in Chicago, getting ready to depart for New York — by tour bus, unfortunately, not train — as part of a tour in support of its sixth studio album, California 37. We hitched a ride on Monahan's train of thought.

There must be nothing like playing Jones Beach in the summer.
This is one of the highlights of our career. The whole Long Island area — my friend Theresa Caputo, who is the Long Island Medium, those are, like, my people. Those are the people I feel most connected with.

Wait, the Long Island Medium is your friend?
Yeah. My daughter was (one day) like, "I gotta watch my show, Dad, I gotta hang up." I was like, "You're too young to have a show." She told me what it was, and I found it on YouTube and cried for about four hours watching it. ... (Caputo) came to see us in Central Park last summer, and we've become friends since then.

We hear fans have been dressing the part for your Mermaids of Alcatraz tour.
People are just having a lot of fun with it. I remember reading a tweet like two months ago and this guy was like, "You're telling your fans to dress up as mermaids? Dude, you've really sold out." And my response was, "Dude, we sold out 15 years ago." (Laughs). Because it's just like, who cares? If you don't want to have fun with us then don't come.

You recently said that this is the happiest you've been on tour.
Yeah, it is. Last summer, I was struggling with losing my voice, and my father had just passed away prior to the tour, and I hadn't really had a break in many years, so I started the tour kinda depressed. ... A few months ago, a chiropractor read my chart. ... He said at our age, our adrenal gland is basically depleted, and our adrenal gland is what handles stress. So, here I am, I lost my dad, and that was like the straw that broke the whole back, I guess. I didn't know where to put my stress so it all started to go to my vocal chords. So he put me on a supplement to help kick start my adrenal gland, and gave me an adjustment, and I have not had vocal problems since.

Liquid Assets

Past Portugal's fortified sips

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Portugal's reputation as the world's premier fortified winemaker hasn't done it any favours when it comes to promoting its other wines.

Port is polarizing, and I've been asked more than once if all Portuguese wines have spirit added.

The country has been making non-fortified reds, whites, rosés and sparklings for centuries. None see a drop of spirit and all would get a lot more attention if it wasn't for their Spanish neighbours hogging all the Iberian Peninsula limelight.

Like all warmer climate countries, Portugal knows its way around a refreshing wine and Vinho Verde (or green wine) is its classic warm weather white. Though the northern region that shares its name makes other colours, it's the chillable white version that the locals reach for when temperatures rise.

Made from an eclectic blend of indigenous fruit, the Gazela Vinho Verde ($8.30 to $12.49) is a relaxed, citrusy thirst-quencher with a light lemony body, forward acidity and a zesty hint of fizz.

Served well chilled, or even over ice, it works amazingly well with summery dishes like barbecued chicken, shellfish and salads as well as fresh fruit and creamy goat cheese.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

The anatomy of grilled cheese

When you were a child, you thought like a child: grilled cheese sandwiches were made from slices of Velveeta melted between slices of skillet-toasted white bread. Now that you are an adult, it's time to update the sandwich for a more grown-up palate.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ W. WAYT GIBBS, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF THE COOKING LAB, THE CULINARY RESEARCH TEAM LED BY NATHAN MYHRVOLD

Bread

Begin by using better bread. In place of the squishy white stuff, try something with more substance: thickly-cut slabs of flavourful sourdough, sweet brioche or crunchy baguette.

Gooeyness

Next, add interesting texture or flavours to the filling. Thin slices of sweet apple and jalapenos complement sourdough slices. The brioche makes a delicious breakfast or brunch when stuffed with sliced ham, sautéed mushrooms and a fried egg. A baguette yields a bruschetta-like grilled cheese sandwich when dressed with fresh basil leaves, pesto and tomato confit.

Texture

You can use the fanciest, stinkiest, crumbliest cheese if you borrow a trick from food scientists at Kraft. Flip over a box of Velveeta and you'll find, among other ingredients, the reason it melts so uniformly: sodium citrate. This white, crystalline ingredient is a salt of citric acid. Buy sodium citrate at some brewer supply stores or order it online. Just dissolve 11 grams of sodium citrate into 1 1/8 cups (265 mm) of milk or water over medium heat, bring to a simmer, and gradually whisk in 285 grams of finely grated cheese (3 to 4 cups). As the cheese melts, the sodium citrate serves as an emulsifier and prevents the fat from splitting off to form a greasy slick on top. If possible, weigh the cheese because volumes can vary with the kind of cheese and fineness of grating.

Aged White Cheddar on Sourdough with Apples

For the cheese slices:
- 3 tsp (14 g) sodium citrate
- 1/2 cup (115 mm) water
- 6 cups (380 g) aged white cheddar cheese, grated

For the sandwich:
- 8 slices sourdough bread, 1/2 inch thick
- 8 very thin slices apple
- 3 tbsp(30 g) thinly sliced jalapenos

Lightly oil a baking sheet and heat it in an oven set to its lower temperature.

In saucepan over medium heat, dissolve sodium citrate in water, then bring to simmer. Add grated cheese to simmering water a handful at a time while whisking until all of the cheese is completely melted.

Pour the melted cheese onto warmed baking sheet. Tip sheet back and forth to form single layer of even thickness. Cover cheese layer with plastic wrap, and place in the refrigerator until set, about 2 hours. Slice cheese into pieces.

When ready to prepare the sandwiches, heat a large, heavy skillet over medium.

Butter outward-facing sides of each bread slice, assemble sandwiches, each with slice of cheese, slice of apple and bit of jalapenos. Add a sandwich to the skillet and pan-fry until the bread is golden brown and the cheese is melted, 2 to 3 minutes per side. Repeat with remaining sandwiches.

Golf trip earns Lions' Arceneaux a fine

CFL. League slaps receiver on the wrist for using a prop in his putting simulation after TD against Esks

CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

B.C. Lions receiver Emmanuel Arceneaux says he doesn't golf, although you wouldn't know that by his touchdown celebration last weekend.

Arceneaux, after scoring on a 77-yard touchdown against the Edmonton Eskimos last Saturday at BC Place Stadium, picked up the orange corner pylon in the end zone and hit the football like he was using a putter on a green.

Celebrations in the Canadian Football League have come in many different varieties over the years, and have expanded beyond touchdowns.

In the same game, Andrew Harris led four teammates in paddling a make-believe canoe, with Shawn Gore pretending to be swimming alongside the non-existent water vessel, in the end zone after the running back scored his third touchdown of the game.

Because Arceneaux used a prop, the Canadian Football League fined him an undisclosed amount on Thursday.

"I'm not really too much worried about that fine," Arceneaux told reporters.

"I just know not to use a prop. But that's just a part of my game, who I am, my personality. I'm out there having fun. (The) more celebrations that come, I'll just make sure I don't use a prop.

"But my thing is right now just getting back out there on the field of play."

Emmanuel Arceneaux vows to keep his eye on the ball and his hands off celebratory props. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Back on the field

Lions' Bighill could return Tuesday

It's a possibility linebacker Adam Bighill could return to the Lions lineup Tuesday against the Argos.

Bighill suffered a sprained left ankle in B.C.'s win over Toronto in Week 2.

He took part in practice Thursday, going up against the Lions' first-team offence.

"I was pleased with what I saw, for sure," said head coach Mike Benevides of Bighill. "The offence is going fast to try to get their plays, so that helps him react."

Arceneaux spoke quickly to reporters and then left the club's Surrey facility to undergo an X-ray on his injured ankle.

Taking reps with the first-team offence in place of Arceneaux the last two days has been Ernest Jackson, who appeared in 10 games and recorded 27 receptions and one touchdown for the Lions last season.

He also had eight rushes for 86 yards and one touchdown.

If Arceneaux can't play Tuesday against the Toronto Argonauts, Jackson, who has yet to play a game this season, will slide into that spot.

"Any opportunity that comes your way, it's very important to me, regardless if I'm going to play or I'm going to sit ..." said Jackson.

NHL

Canucks sign Port Coquitlam product

The Vancouver Canucks have gone local again, signing centre Zach Hamill of Port Coquitlam in a deal that was announced Thursday morning.

Hamill played his minor hockey in Port Coquitlam, before eventually moving on to the Everett Silvertips in the Western Hockey League.

Hamill is originally a draft pick of the Boston Bruins, selected eighth overall in the 2007 NHL Draft.

However, his professional career to this point has been spent largely in the minor leagues.

In 20 career NHL games, he has just four assists.

The Canucks also signed winger Colin Stuart.

Canadian Open

American Steeles opening round

Even though half the field had yet to play on Thursday, the first round of the 2013 RBC Canadian Open was largely decided by noon.

Brendan Steele held on to his early clubhouse lead to win the first round of the Canadian Open after shooting a 7-under 65, with no golfer in the afternoon grouping able to crack the top five of the $5.6-million PGA Tour event in Oakville.

The 30-year-old Steele played consistent golf over the par-72, 7,253-yard Glen Abbey Golf Course, only bogeying the par-4 ninth hole. Steele had eight birdies, five on the front nine alone.

Scott Gardiner, Matt Kuchar and Scott Brown all tied for second, one shot off the pace. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Camilo Sanvezzo has scored 13 of the Whitecaps' 33 goals this season.

Whitecaps look to get back on track vs. Union

The Vancouver Whitecaps will look to get back to their recent winning ways when they host the Philadelphia Union at BC Place Stadium on Saturday.

And this one has the possibility of being a high-scoring, offensive-minded match.

The Whitecaps are tied for the Major League Soccer lead in goals-for, with 33. Alongside them is Real Salt Lake, as of Thursday afternoon.

Only one goal back is the Union.

Adding importance to this match is where both teams sit in their respective conference standings.

The Union are fourth in the Eastern Conference with 31 points. As of Thursday, the Union were only five points back of Sporting Kansas City, the top team in that conference.

The Whitecaps, after their loss to the L.A. Galaxy last weekend, sit fourth in the Western Conference, with a record of 9-6-5. They're only one point ahead of the Colorado Rapids, the sixth-place team, and only five points out of first. METRO

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Take care of your health today because you could easily overdo it. That applies to social activities, especially. By all means have fun but respect your limits. Yes, you do have them, just like everyone else.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Why are you afraid to ask for advice? Maybe it's because you fear you will be told the one thing you don't want to hear. The point is it's the one thing you most need to hear.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Even Geminis have days when their emotions get the better of them and this may be one for you. Whatever others may say or do, you are advised to take none of it seriously.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may be flattered by someone's attention but are they being sincere? According to the planets, they may be buttering you up because there is something they want from you. Find out what it is.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
There is one more obstacle you need to find a way past before you are free to chart a new course. It does not matter how you deal with it so long as you make a choice and stick to it.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Try not to come on too strong, either in your personal life or at work, because people may take it the wrong way. You know how much you hate being told what to do. Well, they feel that way too.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You may wish that someone would be more careful about the company they keep but you must not be too forceful about it. If you insist they steer clear, they will most likely do the opposite just to spite you.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
No one is following you and no one is planning to trip you up. So why do you feel this way? Maybe it's just your guilty conscience — again.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Sometimes you can impose your will on others but it won't be so easy today. In fact, the more you try to tell others what to do, the more they will do something different.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may be tempted to disappear for a while, to leave the mad world behind you, but the planets say you should stay right where you are and do something decisive. Running never solves any problem.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Do something practical to help a friend in need but draw the line at giving them money. They may mean it when they promise to pay you back soon but the planets warn they may not be able to.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
A friend is feeling low and needs some kind words. Who better than Pisces to say the right things? Remind them why life is always worth living — and while you're at it remind yourself. SALLY BROMPTON
